I think SCQF qualifications are better for some people than NQ courses. There's more variety and choice, and you can do loads of subjects in the same department if you like it there.

It's better for me not to have a final exam. I like working at my own pace to complete tasks and SCQF courses let me do that.

You do different courses like events and furniture making, it's not the same as doing Business and CDT. This might help with your career choice

I really like the flexibility that the SCQF qualifications offer - you can sometimes achieve more than award depending on the subject and units you achieve.

Classes are often less stressful because you're not having to revise for a final exam. As long as you complete your coursework to a good standard you will probably pass.
